HONGKONG, THURSDAY, NOV. 12, 1868,

SAFETY IN HONGKONG. IT is an undoubted fact that much of the inconvenience experienced by residents in Hongkong, as regards the restricted area at their command for exercise and recreation, is owing to the defective state of the police organization of the Colony. The new comer is astonished to learn that, practically speaking, the inhabited portion of the island is the limit of his walks and rides, if he desires to enjoy them solus in perfect safety, and free from apprehension as to assault and robbary Having learned of the existence of Stanley and Aberdeen and, after gazing at the Peak, expressed a desire to behold the view from its summit in the cooler and darker hours of the day, he stands amazed to learn that it is necessary to form "a party" either to visit the more picturesque portions of the island, or achieve the not very prodigious feat of walking to the Peak after sunset or before sunrise. Of course he will be told that people do go up to the Peak by themselves, and occasionally visit Stanley or Aberdeen with no companion save a stick or umbrella; but he will not be long in finding out that such excursions have a spice of daring in them, and though well enough for muscular young men who may take care not to display their watches or jewellery too ostentatiously, are rather avoided by steady middle-aged people, or ladies who only desire to enjoy the pleasures of the coun-

Now we cheerfully concede that since Sir R. MacDonnell arrived at Hongkong a great change has come over the Colony. Crimes of violence have almost disappeared within the actual boundaries of the city, and the less frequented roads outside them are much safer. But we The postage must be prepaid as fol- defy even the present energetic head of the police to say that the feeling we have alluded to, of parts of the island being unsafe, does not exist. It may be well founded, or it may have little or no foundation, but it exists on the part of a large number of the Colonists, and we submit that this fact reflects extreme discredit upon British organization. We would not be understood as in this instance attaching individual blame to the officers or men of the force which is supposed to ensure our safety, and for which the Colony is taxed to an extent hitherto unheard of in any equal por tion of the British Empire. We are not propounding the ours, but exposing the evil. At Saigon, at Shanghai, at Tien tsin, anywhere in fact where the hund nitarian vagaries of former pseudophi lanthropists have not exercised their baneful influence, one never hears that if is "dangerous" to walk for three mile out of the foreign town. Yet here in Hongkong many will assert that the would not descend from the peak duris twilight, or come across the hills, by themselves, in broad daylight unles aimed with a pistol! but prudently) had quietly taken pistols with them in case of emergency.

It is to this general feeling of ill-defined mistrust both on the island and at Kowloong that we would draw attention and urge the government to take every posmible measure to increase not so much perhaps the absolute safety of the country roads as the public feeling of security. Constant patrolling is of course a neces sity; and surely our not very hard-worked troops in garrison might give much help in this way especially as it seems pretty certain that we shall have to bear the cost heretofore imposed upon us as a Military Contribution. We are not very zealous advocates of Chinese customs. as our readers will admit; but we must confess that when we contrast the nati system of patrols in use at Canton with that in vogue here, we suffer by the comparison. As we have said, however, it can be trusted against such temptations. is not our object to enter upon the details of such action as may be necessary to do away with the evil; but on the part of many residents we may fairly hope that strenuous measures to abate it will be taken by the competent authori-

LOCAL.

Nos. 1 and 2 of a series of intended controversial tracts have been forwarded to us. with a suggestion that they should appear in the issue of Saturday. The motive which prompted the sender may be a very good one, and we have no desire to question the sincerity of his own belief that is doing a good work; but, while we full admit that a portion of our columns migh well be devoted occasionally to matters of more spiritual importance than the price of grey shirtings, or the result of a boat race, we decline becoming parties to a theological tirade against any particular body of professing Christians. Much more positive is our refusal when, as in the case these tracts, the assault is made against "the religious doctrines of Christendom." which are described as "fables." An at tack on Christianity generally, in its Protestant and Roman Catholic forms, would seem to most people a hopeless sort of task. Both these sections of the Christian world agree in accepting the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. This and other doctrines, the tract says, the scriptures do not teach. What the scriptures do teach may be learnt from certain books which emanate. from the source whence the tracts come. and to which the anxious inquirer is directed. Perhaps this is the moral which the tracts are intended to convey.

An adjourned inquest was held to-day by the Coroner and a Jury (Messrs Manger, Sueil and Verril) upon the body of an exconstable named James Dunn, who was blic some days ago. He was apparently last seen in a state of intoxication, with a bundle under his arm, on his way to take a sampan to go on board the ship Veritas. Foul play is scarcely suspected, as he was found to have been laboring under some pulmonary disease; but an inquiry was made by Stewart, as his money was found to gone, and his pockets turned inside out The inquest was again adjourned.

SPIRIT LICENSES. An adjourned meeting of Justices. spirits was held this foremoon. Present:-Mr. May (presiding), Mesars Mitchell, Walker, Deane and Tonnochy. Mr C. L. Davies, Secretary to the Hongkong Hotel, was granted a spirit license for that establishment. The double application of Mr Pearce (Fawcett's) and David Browne (former) barkeeper at the Oriental Bowling Alley was then gone, into. Mr Sharp again appeared for Mr Pearce. It may be romembered that Browne applies for a renewal of the license of the Bowling Alley and Bar, or for a new license for a house to be built upon the site of Fawcett's old store; and that, as Pearce had intimated his intention of conducting this bar on his own account as landlord of the place, if he could get the license for it, the dispute arose. -Mr Sharp said that they had made a very fair offer to Browne, which the latter had refused, With regard to the question of the store, he had looked over the ordinance carefully and he saw no reason why Mr Pearce should not conduct both businesses, owing to the very convenient nature of both premises, which communicated but were yet separate. Mr Pearco's wife and family lived over the bar and alley, and their presence, together with the facts that the applicant was a man of respectability, and would be on the premises day, and night, would be sufficient guarantee that the house would be quietly conducted.—The Justices agreed in saying that they could not grant Browne's application for a license for the corner house, as that house was not yet built, and when built it would be seen from Queen's Road. This application was therefore refused. — Browneappealed most pathetically as to hav- so definite as not to be capable of a gloss. ing been thus pushed out of a living, by the | "The Consuls shall consult," says the trea- | any other." but Mr May observed that the Justices had and composed of my own nominees devoted that its "standard bearer, Charles a public duty to perform and could not go to my own interests, who shall have orders into the rights and wrongs of private perpushing their own fortunes in their own way. -Mr Sharp said that Pearce did not wish to bush Browne out : they had made an offer to him, which he had refused. -Mr Pearce remarked that he would be glad if Browne stayed in the house : as he paid $200 a-mouth to the former landlord, he did not see why he should not pay the same now. - After five minutes' consultation between Mr Sharp and the

This the Justices unanimously didithe case was thus amicably settled: a trifle higher rent being agreed to be paid to Pearce by Browne, the holder of the license. Mr Hazeland appeared to support a petition presented to the Justices by James Browne, to whom, the application for a license for the Hotel des Colonies was refused at last meeting; and, in doing so, marked that the female barkeeper objected to by the Justices had given place to a male barkeeper. - Mr Mitchell observed that the female barkeeper was only one ground for refusal: it was the opinion of the Justices. upon the evidence of the Colonial Surgeon and the Police Superintendent, that the place was a sort of alv brothel, and that many other women were in the house. - Mr. Hazeland submitted that, if the objection mentioned had been removed; the license might afterwards be granted.—Mr Deane said that he looked upon the subject more in the light of a question, whether or not icense.—Mr Walker said that the Colonial Surgeon spoke very strongly on the sub ect.—Mr Hazeland rominded the Justices that there had been an evident set against Browne because he was a colored man; but

Our complaints were ; first that our article of the 4th April was made the occasion of further advance towards political power. Now what do we find by a reference to our that an assistant-shroff in the employ of correspondent's letter? The remarkabl admission that it was not till that ver month that any money commenced to paid over to Mr Hart for these purpose It will likewise be noted that it was not for some time afterwards that the remarkable scheme of what, under correction, we have no objection to call the "Marine Depart" ment," was put forward. Nay more, it is not denied that the previous arrange ments of Mr Hart himself were shoved aside to make way for this new offspring of his ambition. Secondly, we complained of the new appointments and the men put into them by Mr Hart. In this we acknow ledge we were in error—we stated that they were of all nations, kindreds and tongues: under the authority of our correspondent we are now able to announce that no suc impartiality marked Mr Hart's action, but that they consisted of three Americans, one Frenchman, and two Englishmen. Whether the new arrangement of Customs' Returns has convinced Mr Hart that this is the exact measure of the interests and importance of the nations involved, or whether it may be the carrying out of a programme arranged previously with Mr Burlingame, and dimly shadowed out in that gentleman's celebrated treaty with the Government at Washington, we, not having access to the Inspector General's secrets, cannot be supposed to divine. Third, we objected to the non-erection of the lighthouse on the Amhersts. We said not a word of the proposed light on the Saddles, for the idea of which, to the best of our knowledge, Mr Hart or his subordinates were directly answerable, public opinion when invoked by Mr Fitz-Roy having spoken in no uncertain tone as to the advisability of the former locality. In place of this we find the least eligible spot-one which for sailing ships entering the port from foreign countries is worse than useless, as tempting them to choose a most dangerous course -adopted. When we remember that Gutzlaff is passed but seldom except by steamers trading constantly on the coast, and to whom every sound and headland is known by heart, we can readily appreciate the unfitness of the locality for a leading light to the entrance of the harbour. Fourth, we complained of the unfitness of the new revolving light on the Tungsha ship. If it to difficult to arrange a revolving light on a floating vessel the late Marine Commissioner should have exercised greater discrimination in choice when engaged in looking after these matters during his stay in England management of these matters being taken by Mr. Hart into his own hands, in plain the city, "an iron thief was arrested after contravention of the treaties. FRUIT AND OYSTERS. I am not quite sure whether fruit is alwave brought to us as it should be. Pears and apples, no doubt, bear careful carriage, and however, suddenly they may ripen at last, are often a long time reaching the perfection of maturity, even after they have been gathered; but there is an essence which belongs to most fruit, and which Even the short transfer from the gardenwall to the dish at dessert cannot be made without the loss of some of that subtle flavor which is conveyed by the living stalk from the sun-fed tree. Fruit should be eaten alive, like oysters. There is an edge to the taste of a fresh-opened oyster, which inities of ignorance are a constant theme of comes, I suppose, from the supprise he reverent admiration in religious storyfeels at being suddenly scooped out of his | books. When he is laid out with his brethren in a dish, the whole brood is hopeless and sad. They may still taste of life, but it is of life disappointed. the fresh-opened ovster has no time to grow feverish or melancholy. He is caught in a state of serene unconsciousness of sorrow. He has a sound body, and is therefore wholesome and nice. Allow him to reflect before his dissolution, and the brightness of his spirit is gone, but the quick operation. of detaching him from his shell sends a spasm through his being, which startles all the latent excellence be may possess into sudden and unique perfection. If eaten at lived through the year and other who this crises of his healthful powers, he conveva all the gratification which an oyster is capable of giving to the superior animal,

So, analogously, I believe is it in eating fruit. It must be eaten alive, before the reaction begins to set in from its severance from the life-carrying stem. The Dauphin whom De Quincey quotes as defying smallpox, because no Dauphin had ever died of it, does not get the same credit, because unfortunately his confidence was shained by the result. All literature that is not distinctly didactic, and indeed much that is, encourages sympathy with rashness, which fiction can atways bring off triumphant. Thus the hero of the German tale sells his soul to the devil, on the chance of finding some flaw in the agreement, and proves against all odds the better lawyer of the two. A brilliant youth of bold adventure is held up for admiration in much of the popular biography of our day, and the shattered manhood that succeeds it is kept out of sight; though the one follows the other by a natural consequence, for nothing so unhinges the character as a taste for running risks indulged for any time with impunity. The risks and impua feeling of alarm; and then, in an hour or of bulls. The pair have to pass one in a field. The mother trembles, the child preaches, and her mamma stands rebuked. Probably the lady was foolish, but when her monitor knows more about the ways of bulls, and the current conplaint against them of being inacessible to reason, she too will keep on the safe side of the stile.

Timidity, which is a weak fear of risks, sometimes shows itself in a horror of precautious against them - regarding these as an evidence and admission of possible danger. Hypocliondria, on the other hand, sees risk in everything, and is thus condemned to inaction. Hence the wise physician warns against any approach to the merbid care of one's health. Only use strict moderation, he tells his readers, and they may spare themselves all anxiety about wholesome and unwholesome "a mean and servile solicitude which debases the mind of man and can do little good to his body." In short, those are the proper risks to be run which are accepted under for example, hangs upon its stalk, it is in the sense that we are members of the great
